Dear everyone,

I am writing today because I want you to be the first to know some news.

This has been the hardest time of my life. I am reeling from the loss of my father. I am in deep personal pain and worried about my mom. And now my world has been rocked by so much more.

Today, I was fired from the CBC.

For almost 8 years I have been the host of a show I co-created on CBC called Q. It has been my pride and joy. My fantastic team on Q are super-talented and have helped build something beautiful.

I have always operated on the principle of doing my best to maintain a dignity and a commitment to openness and truth, both on and off the air. I have conducted major interviews, supported Canadian talent, and spoken out loudly in my audio essays about ideas, issues, and my love for this country. All of that is available for anyone to hear or watch. I have known, of course, that not everyone always agrees with my opinions or my style, but I've never been anything but honest. I have doggedly defended the CBC and embraced public broadcasting. This is a brand I've been honoured to help grow.

All this has now changed.

Today I was fired from the company where I've been working for almost 14 years – stripped from my show, barred from the building and separated from my colleagues. I was given the choice to walk away quietly and to publicly suggest that this was my decision. But I am not going to do that. Because that would be untrue. Because I've been fired. And because I've done nothing wrong.

I've been fired from the CBC because of the risk of my private sex life being made public as a result of a campaign of false allegations pursued by a jilted ex girlfriend and a freelance writer.

As friends and family of mine, you are owed the truth.

I have commenced legal proceedings against the CBC, what's important to me is that you know what happened and why.

Forgive me if what follows may be shocking to some.

I have always been interested in a variety of activities in the bedroom but I only participate in sexual practices that are mutually agreed upon, consensual, and exciting for both partners.

About two years ago I started seeing a woman in her late 20s. Our relationship was affectionate, casual and passionate. We saw each other on and off over the period of a year and began engaging in adventurous forms of sex that included role-play, dominance and submission. We discussed our interests at length before engaging in rough sex (forms of BDSM). We talked about using safe words and regularly checked in with each other about our comfort levels. She encouraged our role-play and often was the initiator. We joked about our relations being like a mild form of Fifty Shades of Grey or a story from Lynn Coady's Giller-Prize winning book last year. I don't wish to get into any more detail because it is truly not anyone's business what two consenting adults do. I have never discussed my private life before. Sexual preferences are a human right.

Despite a strong connection between us it became clear to me that our on-and-off dating was unlikely to grow into a larger relationship and I ended things in the beginning of this year. She was upset by this and sent me messages indicating her disappointment that I would not commit to more, and her anger that I was seeing others.

After this, in the early spring there began a campaign of harassment, vengeance and demonization against me that would lead to months of anxiety.

It came to light that a woman had begun anonymously reaching out to people that I had dated (via Facebook) to tell them she had been a victim of abusive relations with me. In other words, someone was reframing what had been an ongoing consensual relationship as something nefarious. I learned – through one of my friends who got in contact with this person – that someone had rifled through my phone on one occasion and taken down the names of any woman I had seemed to have been dating in recent years. This person had begun methodically contacting them to try to build a story against me. Increasingly, female friends and ex-girlfriends of mine told me about these attempts to smear me.

Someone also began colluding with a freelance writer who was known not to be a fan of mine and, together, they set out to try to find corroborators to build a case to defame me. She found some sympathetic ears by painting herself as a victim and turned this into a campaign. The writer boldly started contacting my friends, acquaintances and even work colleagues – all of whom came to me to tell me this was happening and all of whom recognized it as a trumped up way to attack me and undermine my reputation. Everyone contacted would ask the same question, if I had engaged in non-consensual behavior why was the place to address this the media?

The writer tried to peddle the story and, at one point, a major Canadian media publication did due diligence but never printed a story. One assumes they recognized these attempts to recast my sexual behaviour were fabrications. Still, the spectre of mud being flung onto the Internet where online outrage can demonize someone before facts can refute false allegations has been what I've had to live with.

And this leads us to today and this moment. I've lived with the threat that this stuff would be thrown out there to defame me. And I would sue. But it would do the reputational damage to me it was intended to do (the ex has even tried to contact me to say that she now wishes to refute any of these categorically untrue allegations). But with me bringing it to light, in the coming days you will prospectively hear about how I engage in all kinds of unsavory aggressive acts in the bedroom. And the implication may be made that this happens non-consensually. And that will be a lie. But it will be salacious gossip in a world driven by a hunger for "scandal". And there will be those who choose to believe it and to hate me or to laugh at me. And there will be an attempt to pile on. And there will be the claim that there are a few women involved (those who colluded with my ex) in an attempt to show a "pattern of behaviour". And it will be based in lies but damage will be done. But I am telling you this story in the hopes that the truth will, finally, conquer all.

I have been open with the CBC about this since these categorically untrue allegations ramped up. I have never believed it was anyone's business what I do in my private affairs but I wanted my bosses to be aware that this attempt to smear me was out there. CBC has been part of the team of friends and lawyers assembled to deal with this for months. On Thursday I voluntarily showed evidence that everything I have done has been consensual. I did this in good faith and because I know, as I have always known, that I have nothing to hide. This when the CBC decided to fire me. CBC execs confirmed that the information provided showed that there was consent. In fact, they later said to me and my team that there is no question in their minds that there has always been consent. They said they're not concerned about the legal side. But then they said that this type of sexual behavior was unbecoming of a prominent host on the CBC. They said that I was being dismissed for "the risk of the perception that may come from a story that could come out." To recap, I am being fired in my prime from the show I love and built and threw myself into for years because of what I do in my private life.

Let me be the first to say that my tastes in the bedroom may not be palatable to some folks. They may be strange, enticing, weird, normal, or outright offensive to others. We all have our secret life. But that is my private life. That is my personal life. And no one, and certainly no employer, should have dominion over what people do consensually in their private life.

And so, with no formal allegations, no formal complaints, no complaints, not one, to the HR department at the CBC (they told us they'd done a thorough check and were satisfied), and no charges, I have lost my job based on a campaign of vengeance. Two weeks after the death of my beautiful father I have been fired from the CBC because of what I do in my private life.

I have loved the CBC. The Q team are the best group of people in the land. My colleagues and producers and on-air talent at the CBC are unparalleled in being some of the best in the business. I have always tried to be a good soldier and do a good job for my country. I am still in shock. But I am telling this story to you so the truth is heard. And to bring an end to the nightmare.

People are so quick to judge others private lives and how that relates to public perception. What you do in the privacy of your home is your choice as long as it's rewarding and consensual. I can't believe this is happening to you over something that should be a non-issue. Good luck with everything.

Patti Lyn B Bravo Jian for sharing. I along with many others sending you strength, compassion and clarity to stand tall in tough times. As I'm sure by your thousands upon thousands of interview, we all have a story. Your story, sadly is becoming more of a roller coaster than anyone would wish for, especially with it being brought into the public light. I have always admired how you have interviewed people with "delicate" situations, showing much compassion and understanding. May you reach into those pockets of emotions and not be swayed into hate and anger. Many wishes for this to be quickly over and much time for healing and growth.

Lynda Poyser I am very sad that you have been forced to give details of your private life that I'm sure you would rather have left private. That this ex-girlfriend would do this spiteful act to express her anger at your breakup is, unfortunately, a tactic as old as the hills, and also unfortunately has led to your firing. Was it right of the CBC to fire you? Absolutely not! As you have not done anything illegal, I am shocked that the CBC feels the need to terminate you based on what they perceive the image of their on air announcers should be. What of their gay announcers? Their adulterous announcers? What the hell?? You haven't broken the law. I hope your lawyers find that they have. I am so sorry, Jian, that this has happened to you. Take care of your mom and of yourself. Once the truth is out, no one can hold anything over you. You are free. I wish you nothing but the best in your career. Raymond Martin This is a typical scenario where men's rights are violated, and a woman can say anything and have others believe her. CBC is guilty of only caring what they look like if they defend a man, whereas if it were a woman then they would certainly not have fired her for fear of being taken to court over sexism. Please get your story over to A Voice for Men and other such organizations, I'm sure they want to hear about it and may take up your cause.

I would also like to see the evidence that supports your claim. I want to see this because I think it would be entirely appropriate to fire someone if you had reason to believe they committed sexual acts without consent. Nerisane Thomas The state, or the recently become state broadcaster, has no place in the bedrooms of the nation. The opening of eyes to the victimization of people in domestic situations was a watershed moment in Canadian justice. But it does not come without a backlash. Whenever a previously victimized group gains power, there are those who would take advantage of that power. Unjustifiably, BDSM is an exercise of extreme trust. A power exchange which is meant to be the exciting part of it. But if one partner uses that (information about consensual acts) outside of the safe space, it becomes truly abusive. Stay strong, Jian. You are not alone. There are so many who stand with you.

First of all, thank you for being so honest and forthright. To be this up front and to share such personal matters would be unbelievably hard. I'm glad that you were the first to address these issues as such because no one else has and that only breeds supposition and theories. So bravo to you for that! No entity, corporation, person or religion has the right to tell another person what to do in the privacy of their homes, bedrooms etc, as disgusting that I has all come down to that. I thought...wow what could have happened to make CBC let go of JG? How bad could it really be? And now that we know, it seems to me that it wasn't "bad" at all.

Secondly, you have a lot of people who love and support you and while it may not be much comfort at a time such as this, I am hoping that as you move forward you may be able to find some in that. Continue to be brave, to be strong and you will get past this.

With much love from a girl on Vancouver Island.

Alicia D. Fagan This just dreadful news. You have been a pillar of journalistic decency, permitting a plurality of viewpoints. You've hosted interesting guests and helped them explore their stories for us all to enjoy. I became a regular American listener after hearing your show just once late on my San Diego public radio station. This is beneath the CBC and insults its listeners by imagining we'd care. It's no better behavior than old school blackmail of gay people. You're a good man and I hope your career flourishes. I am sorry as well of course about the loss of your father. Godspeed.

It's horrible that Jian has had to launch a lawsuit but I believe he has every right to do so. This is not going to go well for the CBC. The few listeners that they might have lost due to "information" that may come out in the media will be nothing compared to a loss to this lawsuit. -  Terry Wilson I am sorry for all of your losses 5 years ago my son was killed in a car accident. I at that time was suffering from the loss, within 10 days the company that I made my income from fell and I would not be able to continue with that company, being a commissioned sales rep I was at a loss. 2 months went by and I reinvented myself and my business is a successful rate of growth. My sons son I thank for each day, and look for something you want in your life and I promise you it is your future

This loss is a blessing of time. I know what it is like to be fired over honesty also. However you should not have posted all of this if this is indeed you. It is the internet....come to the states and we would love to have you and your show. TMI. Who cares about anyone's sex life? You need this time alone and regroup. Keep writing and blogging, it is a great outlet. I also know this will take 1.5 years of grieving. Not everyone in the states has heard of your show. Here is an opportunity. Again what a curve ball you were thrown!

Honestly I think it is though the CBC WANTS to self destruct... you and your show are one of the CBC's main reasons for even listening to the CBC anymore, public radio isn't used to trust, respect and love. I believe governments past and present thought indisputable budget cuts are trying to undermine the CBC but this gesture is absolutely incomprehensible. Your work is so professional, informative and entertaining and you have always represented Canadas in ways that make me proud. If I never forget your signing copies of your book here in Quebec city and Montreal... how exhausted you must have been having lower in after doing your show that morning! Michael Byers My heart goes out to you in so many ways. The cbc will lose many listeners I'm sure. It saddens me that they are so concerned about this news coming to light. And then in other news media they claim it was because of cutbacks. I have lost some respect for what I thought was a broadcasting corporation that had higher standards. However now I take offense to the notion that the listeners of the CBC are so ignorant that they would just assume that their reputation would be sullied by allegations and that the listeners are sophisticated enough to not get caught up in tabloid news. I guess it really is a corporation. Looking out for what's best for them. Again, I lost a father and just said goodbye to my grandfather so I feel your pain and loss. I am sending you nothing but love and support from Hamilton in whatever you do. After the dust settles I truly hope to hear you on the airwaves again in whatever form that takes. Podcasts are the way it goes it seems. All the best my friend.

Murray Sherman Here's what I wrote.
I'm writing to express my vehement opposition to the decision to fire Jian Ghomeshi because CBC decided what he does in the bedroom is somehow unsavory, as if that's the CBC's decision to make. As a taxpayer and citizen of Canada I demand that this situation be reviewed and Ghomeshi be made whole whether, by his choice, that be he returns to CBC or a settlement is reached.
I've publicly supported the CBC against these regressive Conservatives for years now, and I didn't do that so that some prudish bureaucrat can tell an employee of MY national broadcaster what they can and can't do in the bedroom.
Reverse this decision before you embarrass the once proud CBC any further.
Good day.

Joanne MacGregor This is chickenshit of the network. BDSM is not a black eye to CBC nor to those who practice it. FeLife is based in Canada, for pity's sake. I has been my observation, though I am not into BDSM myself, that those who are tend to have better communication between couples than most vanilla couples do. That this woman would believe in such a manner is most distressing for many reasons. She's apt to live a lonely life from here on, as I can't imagine anyone having any trust in her in the future. I hope this will all turn out well for you somehow. Best wishes.

Talk about a ratings increase. How many of your "superiors" are shaking in their high-heeled thigh-high black zippered boots lest they too be found out? Your integrity and honesty in this matter are insurmountable, and I sincerely hope that the redress you deserve will be granted. I never leave comments, but I have to leave a message of support for you! I listen to a lot of CBC and they have some fantastic on air hosts but you are, in my humble opinion, the best. The guests hosts can't do the job you do. Guests just like a parent is the best caretaker of their own child, no one can present Q like you.

I have a suspicion that larger political interests got involved that tried to damage the CBC as well as you and if true, I hope that bigger picture is revealed. God knows your private lyres which was nobody's business are nothing compared to another snarmy media outlet's very public constant slander, racism and defamation which tries to damage the reps of any and all they target barely gets them a slap on the wrist. And I can imagine they're having a field day at your expense too. That is disturbing. I hope justice and the truth will be known. If there was no crime committed, no charges laid, not even any interest in this story by the media, this firing amounts to a violation of human rights. We live in a society where we consume media based on this subject in copious amounts, but god forbid it's ever a true story. It's nobody's business but your own what goes on between consenting adults, and based on your assertions this certainly seems to be consensual activity. Furthermore, unethical acceptance of any and all accusations made in regards to abuse amounts to mob justice. Guilt must be proven. If these charges can be proven to be fallacious, the CBC should compensate you, and your former girlfriend should be criminally charged.

So, as a fan, I can say (without equivocation) that I don't care about what you do in your personal life so long, as you say, that everything is consensual. The CBC being concerned about the reputation of their institution is laughable. Given the long road that they have to hoe going forward, they should be embracing you - and your public support for the CBC. Let's face it, with programs like Q, the CBC has no future. I have been so patiently awaiting your return after you took the time to mourn your father, and feel like this is such a cruel turn of events. I think this shows great cowardice on behalf of CBC, and as you were the best thing about it, I will no longer tune in to any CBC broadcast, as for your personal life, I appreciate your candor, but what you do outside the studio has no affect on my appreciation for what you create in the studio, and I'm sure I'm not the only one with this sentiment, please be strong and know that while the CBC will suffer from this grave mistake they've made, you have done absolutely nothing wrong, you will survive, you will succeed.
